"I'd like somebody to mention that day that Martin Luther King, Jr., tried to give his life serving others. ... I'd like for somebody to say that day that Martin Luther King, Jr., tried to love somebody. I want you to say that I tried to love and serve humanity. ... Yes, if you want to say that I was a drum major, say that I was a drum major for justice. Say that I was a drum major for peace. I was a drum major for righteousness. ... Yes, Jesus, I want to be on your right or your left side I just want to be there in love and in justice and in truth and in commitment to others, so that we can make of this old world a new world." Martin Luther King, Jr. - February 4, 1968

In 1963, Dr. King shared his dream for the American people ... “we will be able to work together, to pray together, to struggle together... to stand up for freedom together.”

Martin Luther King, Jr., had a dream he shared with the American people.

In 1964, Dr. King won the Nobel Peace Prize.

After the bus boycott, Dr. King traveled to Africa and India to learn more about liberation and nonviolent protest.

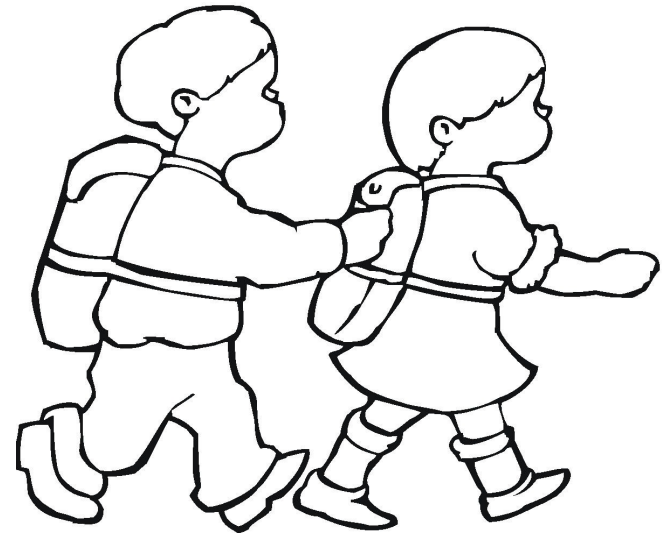

When he came back to the United States, Dr. King worked for civil rights, justice, and peace.

Equal pay for equal work.

He dreamed people would stand up for freedom together.

As a boy, Martin like going to school to learn.

He liked to learn so much that he finished high school, when he was 15 years old.

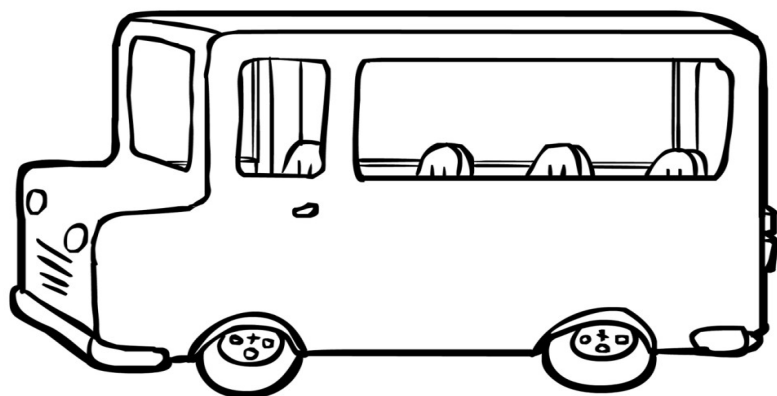

After high school, young Martin went to college. He graduated from Morehouse College and Boston College.

He then becomes the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Next, Dr. King and his wife moved to Montgomery, AL. In the new city, Dr. King was a pastor and preached about Jesus and justice.

Dr. King joined the bus boycott so all people can ride the bus.
